SANDY CREEK

While the Americans were equipping some vessels at SACKETT'S HARBOR, the British conducted a blockade to prevent the entrance of guns and cables for the boats. To Captain WOOLSEY was entrusted the task of conveying them from Oswego Falls by way of Sandy Creek to Sackett's Harbor. A British detachment attempted to intended Woolsey but the Americans were prepared for the attack and in a short time had defeated and captured the British squadron and 170 men.

PENOBSCOT TOWNS

Encouraged by their success at Eastport, the British sent another expedition to conquer still more of the Maine Coast. On Sept 1, 1814 a British fleet entered Penobscot Bay and threatened CASTINE. Seeing that resistance would be useless, the militia fled and left town in the hands of the British, Hampton.

Bongers, and Mackin were taken on the 3rd and 12th with little difficulty, plundered by the invaders; and the inhabitants held as prisoners
